Fear Purchase of Adjoining Property, if Consummated, Would Mean Perpetuation of What Neighborhood Regards as Nuisance.

From all parts of Chesterfield County property owners and citizens gathered at a mass-meeting held in Bon Air last night to protest against the perpetuation of the Virginia Home and Industrial School for Girls on the present site of the institution.

Dr. M. B. Rudd presided at the mass meeting, and many speeches were made condemning the State's policy of maintaining in the thickly settled neighborhood a reform school for incoryoung women. Resolutions were adopted expressing the views of he residents of Bon Air and the surrounding countryside and denouncing the recent negotiations between the trustees of the institution and Percy tilinn, owner of the tract of land adjoining the reform school, which ter minated in a futile attempt to chase the property from Mr. Glina for the purpose of enlarging the grounds the purpose of en-of the institution.

OF GLINN PROPERTY CHECKED The negotiations for the acquisition of the Glinn property failed because Attorney-General John Garland Polthat had been appropriated by the Gen-eral Assembly for the maintenance and nagement of the girls' home, the Auditor C. I.ee Moore refused honor a warrant for the payment of an unexpended balance, which stood Deficiency in temperature since to $3,500, to Mr. Glinn. The price reed upon was $12,500. The trustees contemplated making the first payment on property with the unexpended palance. LONG AND BITTER

While the girls' home was an institution conducted by private philanthropy, its management was greatly harassed by the opposition of the Bon Air people. After a long and bitter controversy the organized body of citizens of Bon Air and Chesterfield County opposing the home carried their grievances against the institution before the grand jury in Chesterfield and secured indictments against officers of

The institution was originally found-ed for the purpose of rescuing unfortu-nate girls of the types enumerated. The records show that many of the girls thus taken into the home have been thus taken into the home have been turned from evil lives and are now living with their parents, relatives or friends, or have found honest employment and are redeeming the past, being respected in the different communities in which they have settled as industrious, hard-working, respectable, Christian women.

The Virginia Home and Industrial School for Girls is peopled with girls ranging in ages from fourteen to twenty years, committed from police courts in the cities and by county magistrates for correction. Many of the inmates received through these channels have not led immoral lives, but are wayward and willful, or have been convicted of petty offenses. Some of the girls are committed to the reform school at the c and willful, or have been convicted of petty offenses. Some of the girls are committed to the reform school at the request of parents or guardians, who have found it impossible to control them at home, and who fear for their norals if they are permitted to continue without such vigorous restraint as only an institution of this kind affords. A few have led vicious and immoral lives, but because of their youth are regarded as susceptible to corrective methods and educational training. Administrative Board Awards Contracts for Extensive Improvements in South Richmond-Increasing Demand for Farm Land.

Itealty yesterday showed a decrease as compared with the business of other as compared with the business of other days this week. The sales have been running strong, and the small amount of business yesterday was the natural reaction from the heavy trading. Business is improving, and the prospects are good. The agents are speaking on every side of the improvement, and only yesterday one agent was comparing the business of to-day with that of three months ago. Agencies dealing in farm lands report a better tone to the market. This class of property is increasing in demand as planting time grows hearer and will show good results, it is said.

The Administrative Board let the contracts yesterday for a number of street improvements, mainly in South Richmond. These improvements will not only be of fast value to the city, but will also not only be of fast value to the city, but will also increase the value of real estate in these sections. Several streets are to be smooth paved, and others are to be paved with granite spall.
